EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Youth in Uganda are the youngest population in the world, with 77% of its population being under 25 years of age. There are 7,310,386 youth from the ages of 10–24 years of age living in Uganda.

Young people (10-24 years) in Uganda face many sexual reproductive health and rights (SRHR) challenges stemming from early, unprotected and forced sexual activity. An underlying factor to this is limited access to youth-friendly SRHR information and services, which impact on young people's ability to make informed and healthy life choices. Especially in many rural areas of Uganda, the provision and uptake of quality adolescent SRHR services remains low.

The goal of this Strategic Plan is to build stronger and more inclusive SRHR Movement for Young People (YP) through research, advocacy, networking and capacity building. Consequently, the objectives of the strategy are to raise awareness of the different SRHR needs of Young People (YP) in Tertiary women and adolescents. To contribute towards positive policy change that will ensure equal access to SRHR services. To foster a culture of inclusivity through embracing different sexual orientations and identities. To hold the government accountable on investment in health through research and campaigns. To use multi-media platforms to create awareness of SRHR to YP. To create a strong network of SRHR advocates through the Alliance SRHR cluster. To provide entrepreneur skills to YP including those with disabilities.

The Strategy advocates harmony with other protocols, strategies and initiatives both nationally, regionally and internationally. For instance, the Strategy is consistent with the spirit and principles espoused by the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD), the Sustainable Development Goals and continental initiatives such as the Maputo Plan of Action, the Africa Health Strategy and other population and health documents.

JOMAS' strategic approach to achieving SRHR is guided by our Impact Model. The Impact Model is a holistic, four-pronged approach that gives us flexibility to adjust objectives and tactics as needed in the fast-paced and changing world of public discourse and policy change.

The strategic documents proposes a number of approaches: Community/Social Mobilization; Lobby and Advocacy; Partnership building; Networking and Collaboration; Capacity Building and Awareness Creation; Research, Policy Analysis and Documentation; and Strategic Communications.

To achieve its goals, the Strategy identifies key cross-cutting themes, such as health systems strengthening, attention to service quality, mainstreaming gender, creating linkages and partnerships, resource mobilization, developing monitoring, evaluation and surveillance systems.

BOARD CHAIR MESSAGE

For millions of young people around the world, the onset of adolescence brings not only changes to their bodies but also new vulnerabilities to human rights abuses, particularly in the arenas of sexuality, marriage and childbearing.

Millions of girls are coerced into unwanted sex or marriage, putting them at risk of unwanted pregnancies, unsafe abortions, sexually transmitted infections (STIs) including HIV, and dangerous childbirth. Adolescent boys are at risk, as well. Young people – both boys and girls – are disproportionately affected by HIV.

Yet too many young people face barriers to reproductive health information and care. Even those able to find accurate information about their health and rights may be unable to access the services needed to protect their health.

Adolescents' and young people's sexual and reproductive health must be supported. This means providing access to comprehensive sexuality education; services to prevent, diagnose and treat STIs; and counselling on family planning. It also means empowering young people to know and exercise their rights – including the right to delay marriage and the right to refuse unwanted sexual advances. JOMAS partners with other likeminded organizations, UN agencies and with governments, civil society, young people and youth-serving organizations, religious and cultural institutions to actively promote and protect the sexual and reproductive health and human rights of adolescents and young people.

Working with ministries, NGOs and other partners, JOMAS also advocates for and supports the efficient delivery of a holistic, youth-friendly health-care package of services. These include:

- Universal access to accurate sexual and reproductive health information;
- A range of safe and affordable contraceptive methods;
- Sensitive counselling
- Quality obstetric and antenatal care for all pregnant women and girls; and
- The prevention and management of sexually transmitted infections, including HIV

JOMAS also works to ensure health services and supportive programmes are available to young people who are marginalized or hard to reach.

We are therefore, pleased to present to you our new strategic plan 2022-2026 aimed at enhancing access to SRHR services and information for young people aged 12-30 years.

Board Chair, JOMAS BOD

The lack of high quality Sexual and Reproductive Health services and education in Uganda has meant high rates of HIV and other Sexually Transmitted Infections, teenage pregnancy and child marriage. This damages young people's life prospects, increasing school dropouts and impacting their physical and economic health.

As a contributor to the attainment of the East and Southern Africa (ESA) commitments, JOMAS announces full support to the implementation of comprehensive sexuality education (CSE). Although Uganda through Ministry of Education and Supports developed and launched the National Sexuality Education Framework (NSEF) for School Setting, there is no realistic plan to reach out to groups of young people with different vulnerabilities. There is also no National Sexuality Education Framework for Out-of-School Youth.

That's why we are committed to increasing access to Sexual and Reproductive health services and information for young people both in and out of school. JOMAS specifically targets those most vulnerable to unsafe sexual practices, including young people living with disabilities and living in marginalized communities. We use three major strategies to increase availability and access.

Firstly, we have coordinated and built a network of like-minded organizations with local knowledge, that we support to expand and improve their Sexual and Reproductive Health services and information. At the same time we work alongside health, education, gender and other public and private organizations to build youth engagement with services and information.

Perhaps most importantly we work directly with young people (Young Men, Boys, Young Women and Girls). We train them to conduct research, and document their experiences in order to effectively influence decision-makers, shaping both government policy and community attitudes.

Supporting young people to identify problems and solutions, and advocate for change in their own access ensures meaningful, sustainable and targeted change to services. Not only this but we are investing in and increasing the leadership skills of young people and helping them to claim their voice in all areas of their lives.

Our young people are also helping to plug the gaps. They are trained to deliver Sexual and Reproductive health education to other young people with disabilities through peer-to-peer learning.

1.0. WHO WE ARE?

1.1. JOMAS History

JOMAS Foundation Africa is an independent registered national non-government and non-profit organization based in Wandegeya, Kampala. JOMAS prime motto is empowerment for all.

In 2018 a group of educated, dynamic, like-minded and committed young people of different backgrounds, different religions, different gender and different faith got together to establish an organization, for addressing the most urgent and pressing needs of their fellow young people, women and men of Uganda as the preliminary youth advocates and change agents in their country. True to this spirit the organization was named Joint mechanism for access on sexual reproductive health and rights (JOMAS).

Considering their association with the development sector the group was cognizant of the plethora of problems plaguing the country. Consequently, the organization's focus was not kept limited either in terms of geography or sector. Whilst operating in different districts of the province, JOMAS has been carrying a range of interventions in the areas of education, health and law targeting YP.

The type of activities undertaken by the organization range from capacity building, empowerment programs, advocacy programs to service delivery, with focus remaining on the deprived and marginalized segments of the nation. Whereas in terms of operations what characterizes JOMAS functioning are its efforts to (a) enlist involvement of the locals when initiating activities at the grass root level; and (b) mobilize girls, women and men for bringing peace, tolerance, end to violence and development in society.

1.2. Our Vision

We envision a just and inclusive world where all children and youth grow up in safe environments, equipped with the knowledge, tools, and opportunities necessary to succeed in life. We strive to empower communities through impactful and transformative programs that address the root causes of vulnerability, and we work hand in hand with stakeholders across multiple sectors to create a future where youth are agents of change and development.

1.3. Our Mission

Our mission is to empower communities through transformative education, safeguarding interventions, and youth livelihood programs that foster resilience and promote long-term development. We aim to create enabling environments where vulnerable children and youth can access opportunities that enhance their well-being and capacity to lead dignified, self-reliant lives.

1.4. Our Values

1.1.1. Inclusivity

JOMAS is an open, inclusive space that welcomes adolescents and young people in their diversity.

1.1.2. Justice

JOMAS believes that any SRHR initiative must address racial, social and economic equity.

1.1.3. Human Rights

We affirm the rights of young men and boys, young women and girls to meaningfully participate in decision-making processes at all levels, including in aligning key SRHR policy instruments with national development plans and developing SRHR responses that center human rights.

1.1.4. Intersectionality

We take an intersectional approach in collective work for SRHR and climate justice, recognizing that climate change affects people differently based on their multiple identities. An intersectional approach is key to ensure that climate interventions adequately account for women's and girls' realities and needs in climate crises.

1.1.5. Bodily Autonomy

We support and advocate for the fundamental right of every individual to make decisions about their body, their health and their future without coercion or control by others, including with regard to choices about whether or not to be pregnant or on how many children to have.

1.5. Target Communities and Localities

JOMAS will continue to work with both in and out of school young people aged 12 – 30 Years including men and adolescent boys, women and adolescent girls, young people with disabilities, young people living with HIV, Young Female Sex Workers and Young People who Inject Drugs in an inclusive development approach. JOMAS targets groups including young people in the urban and rural communities who are still living in miserable conditions, misinformed and deprived of very basic necessities of life. JOMAS also works with health workers, paramedics, counselors and other staff related to health issues, teachers, students, media personnel, environmentalists and stakeholders in the field of health, education and environment.

2.0. SITUATION ANALYSIS

Young people (YP) have limited access to accurate and timely sexuality information and services. Comprehensive knowledge about HIV prevention including knowledge about SRHR information and available service options among YP aged 10–24 has stagnated at 45.5%<sup>1</sup>. It is important to avail YP most marginalized the right SRH information to enable them make informed decisions and access SRHR services to improve their health outcomes. In addition, most community-centered approaches to male involvement in health/SRHR programs are not primarily about men's SRH needs but a conduit and tool to promote women's and girls' SRH needs as revealed by a recent national study. Uganda has several key policies and legal frameworks that could impact SRH outcomes for YP if implemented including: National Sexuality Education Framework (NSEF); 2020 Revised Guidelines for the Prevention and Management of Teenage Pregnancy in School settings in Uganda; The 2018 Uganda National Parenting Guideline; National Self-Care for SRHR Guideline (Draft). Implementation of most of these has been frustrated by non-progressive attitudes informed by the cultural and religious values and norms. Cultural and religious leaders continue to perceive Comprehensive Sexuality Education (CSE) as an immoral and unacceptable subject to discuss with YP. Yet, these are given a resounding platform during policy-making processes by policy and lawmakers as they own 70% of schools and health facilities. Linked to this, most parents and communities are not able to provide sexuality education to YP.

Lack of meaningful engagement of YP in the designing of programmes that target their health and well-being results into poor health outcomes for YP. Meaningful and inclusive youth participation (MIYYP) means that YP are able to participate in all stages of decision making, that their opinions are respected and included in final policies, frameworks and guidelines. Yet, YP lack the capacities to advocate and occupy policy-making spaces. This partly explains why existing policy and legal frameworks lack progressive (open-minded) provisions on YP's access to SRHR information and services. Yet, they seek to create an over-arching national direction for providing YP with Sexuality Education in the formal education setting. It is documented in research that students and YP are not proactively engaged in the design and implementation of youth-friendly approaches in regard to their SRH needs.<sup>2</sup>

Poor Health Seeking Behaviour among Young Men and Boys: We acknowledge that although men are homogeneous by sex, they are heterogeneous by characteristics on matters concerning seeking health care. We also appreciate that men's health seeking behaviour is a complex phenomenon. Men have been stereotyped as being reluctant towards seeking health care when faced with illness. We believe that determinants of health-seeking behaviour have been under investigated. We recognize that efforts to understand men's health-seeking behaviour are poorly understood in the AIDS epidemic, and encouraging men to get tested and into treatment is a major challenge, but one that is poorly recognized. JOMAS will establish determinants of men's health seeking behaviour in Uganda.

JOMAS influences formulation and review of new and existing policies in Uganda to ensure YSRHR is an integral part of the policy environment across all sectors.

7.3. Partnership building, Networking and Collaboration

We bring them together, the people who can, should, and do change the course of young people's health and rights. We know that the more we work together, the more quickly we can break down barriers and achieve change. We expand partnerships, collaborate and network with other agencies on YSRHR engagement, which is a fairly new concept. The ideal is to have all actors incorporate YSRHR engagement in their work and thus the building of stronger and more inclusive movements for SRHR.

7.4. Capacity Building and Awareness Creation

We ensure the membership and likeminded agencies/partners appreciate and are able to incorporate YSRHR engagement into their institutional programming. We influence attitudes and knowledge on YSRHR engagement, which is a new aspect in the work of partners and other actors.

7.5. Research, Policy Analysis and Documentation

We generate evidence and enhance learning and sharing of information and lessons learnt on Youth Sexual Reproductive Health and Rights engagement and related programming and other aspects. With the facts in hand, we can effectively hold the government of Uganda accountable to its national commitments and for the impacts its actions and funding have on SRHR. We make these facts available to the young people, so they can take the power in their hands to effect change.

7.6. Strategic Communications

We won't stay quiet. We share stories of the impact of Uganda's policies and advance our messages, loudly and proudly. Communications is critical to spread the message that SRHR are essential to empowering young people including girls and young women.
